

BOXING—SPORTS OF ALL SORTS—BASEBALL

Harry Sinclair, Federal magnate, foster father to most of the Fed athletes, so far as assuming their contracts is concerned, is fairly confident that he will be able to buy into organized baseball, either as owner of the New York Giants or Yankees.

That is best evidenced by the prices he is asking for some of the stars he has under his wing. Charley Weeghman asked Sinclair to put a price on Lee Magee and Benny Kauff, and the oil magnate, not wanting to turn his old pal down flat, offered Magee at $60,000 and Kauff at $80,000. Needless to say, Charles did no more dickering.

However, Weeghman will try to land Steve Yerkes and Fred Anderson from the Buffeds. Yerkes should still have some second basing in his system, and Anderson is touted by Artie Hofman as a grand spit-baller, built along the lines of Ed Walsh.

Hofman himself is a free agent and may remain in Chicago. He has asked Frank Chance for a job with Los Angeles. In the event he does not land there he intends to organize a semi-pro team and play games at the old West Side park. Hofman's team would draw well as he has a large personal following among the old guard of Cub followers.

Charles A. Fredericks, for 14 years secretary of the White Sox, died yesterday at 4030 Michigan av. He had been ill for four years, unable to attend to business. Fredericks came to Chicago when the first invasion was made by the American league.

White Sox officials deny that a contract has been sent to Malcolm Galvin, University of Wisconsin pitcher, who quit football in the middle of the season, when charges of professionalism were preferred against him. At that time it was rumored he would join the Cubs. Galvin is a pitcher and rated highly in college circles.

Roy Corhan, shortstop, who made a fine showing with the White Sox until he was beamed by Russell Ford, is coming back to the big tent. The St. Louis Cards have given San Francisco Hub Perdue, Lefty Robinson and Ham Hyatt in exchange for him.

Battling Levinsky whipped Tom Cowler, Jim Corbett's heavyweight protege, in 12 rounds at Boston. Early in the fight Cowler sent Levinsky down for the nine count, but the New Yorker rallied.

August Kleckhefer, three-cushion billiardist, rallied from a long slump last night and defeated James Maturro in an Interstate league game, 50 to 26. Kleckhefer ran his string in 42 innings, setting a new record for the league. This is something like the form he displayed before challenging Champion De Oro. Since that match he has been badly off his game.

Fred Bruun, professional ski jumper, was seriously hurt in a fall at the Cary slide.

Because of the war Montreal has dropped out of the Grand Circuit and the two weeks of trotting usually carded for the Canadian city have been divided between Cleveland and Columbus.

Now Fred Fulton, the Rochester giant, has a new match on the fire. He is to battle Frank Moran ten rounds in New York some time in February. His manager canceled the proposed fight with Porky Flynn for New Orleans because of the severe beating administered by Jack Dillon. Tommy Burns promises to match the winner of the Fulton-Moran fight with Jess Willard in a 20-round battle for the heavyweight championship. This ambitious program is subject to revision without notice.

Charley Pavlicek, captain of the University of Chicago swimming team, will be out of competition for the majority of the season because
